A new interactive hand-hygiene training course and promotional materials to emphasize the importance of hand hygiene and to help increase compliance at your facility are available on the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) Web site. The course reviews key concepts of hand hygiene and other standard precautions to prevent health-care-associated infections. The program also includes questions to promote thought about current practices and to encourage proper hand hygiene along with a video showing hand-hygiene techniques. This program can easily be used for training in USAF facilities at a staff meeting. The interactive CDC hand-hygiene educational course can be viewed by visiting:
